Improve Social Connectedness

Physical changes, limited mobility, the loss of family and friends, and living alone can make it difficult to connect with others as we age. However, there are many ways to establish and maintain close relationships with others.

- ◆ Do things you already enjoy doing with others, such as taking a walk or painting
- ◆ Visit community areas, such as parks, places of worship, and senior centers
- ◆ Engage in new activities and hobbies with others, such as: Cooking and baking, Gardening, Group sports, like golf and pickleball, Outdoor adventures, like hiking and kayaking, Crafts, like knitting and woodworking, Group exercise, like water aerobics and dancing, Arts, like painting and ceramics, Book clubs, Card or board games, Faith-based activities,
- ◆ Maintain regular in-person interactions with friends and family, and connect by phone or video calls
- ◆ Engage in activities you enjoy and adjust when needed based on your physical ability

Opioids

How to Identify and Respond to an Overdose

If someone takes more opioids than their body can handle, they can pass out, stop breathing, and possibly die. Follow the steps below to possibly save their life.

1. Look for signs of an opioid overdose

- Slow or no breathing
- Gurgling, gasping, snoring
- Clammy skin
- Blue nails or lips

2. Try to wake them up

- Rub your knuckles hard over their chest bone. If they don't wake up, they need medical help right away.

3. Call 911

- Notify 911 of the situation
Remember: You cannot be held liable for volunteering to provide medical support to someone in need of care. This is the Good Samaritan Law

4. Administer Naloxone

- If you have a Naloxone/Narcan kit from a local pharmacy, use it as directed to stop the adverse effects of an opioid overdose.
